Harry Davenport and John Litel.*

A taut drama, exciting action, the rugged magnificence of the Redwood forests filmed in color, and splendid performances by a fine cast are interwoven with music and fantasy in the unfolding of "The Enchanted Forest." It is as beautiful as a Disney feature come to life!

The story concerns five people who come to the Enchanted Forest, each in search of the answer to his individual need. Harry Davenport as Old John, the Hermit, gives a memorable performance. Little Billy Severn, as the lost child whose playmates are the wild creators of the forest, is delightful. Brenda Joyce as the mother of Billy does full justice to a strong, emotional role. Edmund Lowe and John Litel are equally well cast.

Of no small importance are the animal actors portraying the birds and beasts who befriend Old John and the boy. The highly imaginative treatment of their "speech" by means of the musical score which is integrated in the picture, gives special distinction to the production. Albert Hay Malotte, who set the Lord's Prayer to music, wrote the score. The composer has done a splendidly original job which is not only good music but part and parcel of the story itself. His music, besides being lilting, imaginative and enjoyable, portrays the enchanting spirit that pervades the story.

The story has all the charm of a fairy tale, yet the reality of its human drama is never lost. Here is a picture that will capture the hearts of all who see and thrill to its warm and captivating story. Every member of your family will come to love not only the real actors, but the denizens of the forest who do everything but talk.
